

C-Sea Lion Point

It started two years ago. A simple request, a complex project. Design a landmark icon, a grand wilderness lodge on British Columbia's Sonora Island for the A-list jet set.

And so a very special place comes to life. Sea Lion Point.

Simply named for the rookery just off shore, this 10,000 square foot lodge tells the story of Sonora Island with each and every finish, fabric, suite name and floor plan that's intricately woven into Sea Lion Point's design.

The ceiling heights at a staggering 35 feet evoke the awe of entering a cathedral in the woods. Floor to ceiling windows bring the rainforest and seaside vistas in. Directed by Céline Interiors, an extensive commissioned art collection of British Columbia's artists interprets the beauty and majesty in a contemporary way. Highlights include eighteen native poles or 'story' poles carved to symbolize the glorious seasons.

Imagine, you've just checked into the Dancing Urchin Suite. Your favourite aria is playing. The lights are programmed to "relax". You're gazing onto majestic cedars and tidal pools from your spa bath while sipping champagne. Roughing it can't get any better than this. We call it "glamping in style".
